

Stefan Aspostoluk, Ben Foster and Sam Morrison

ORT America NextGen Trivia Night

ORT America held its seventh annual NextGen Trivia Night May 23 for about 100 attendees in the 25-45ish age range. To win, the six-player team required a wealth of knowledge to answer questions ranging from Ginger Spice's real name to facts about the history and mission of ORT. To make it fair, emcee Marty Shankle instructed all players to place their cell phones in a bowl in the center of each table. After hosting the trivia night for four years, he knows what he's doing. Competition was fierce between such teams as Trivia Newton John, the Full ORT Press and the OAF's, an all-mom team from Joseph and Florence Mandel Jewish Day School. Perhaps the biggest supporters were from the Kadis family. Larry Kadis is ORT's national president and his son, Alex Kadis, was the co-chair of the evening along with Ben Golsky. Money raised from a silent auction will support a school in Kfar Silver, Israel. By the way, Ginger Spice's real name is Geri Halliwell. The Cleveland Jewish News was a sponsor of the event.

Event co-chair Ben Golsky and trivia night emcee Marty Shankle

ORT Ohio Executive Director Char Rapoport Nance and region president Greg Marcus, who is also a member of the Cleveland Jewish Publication Company Board of Directors

Danny Weiser, Adam Martinson, Yury Fridman, Rachel Martinson, Haleigh Shankle

Yael Amitz-Lev Sperber and Desi Kate

Team OAF Rifka Claypool, Amanda Kurland and Liraz Levi; back, Stacy Lane, Robin McCann and Heather Sesnowitz

Participants confer on an answer.

Event co-chair Alex Kadis with his mother Suellen, father Larry, who is ORT national president and brother Justin Kadis

Samantha and Adam Probst, Rachel Rood and Marsha Levenson

Siblings Matthew and Allie Kneitel