RAHELI

Hodayot, Israel

I come from a big family, and all four of my siblings have come to Hodayot to study and live here. Until the age of 12, I lived in America. When my parents got divorced, I moved to Akko, Israel with my mother and siblings. My parent’s divorce was very difficult for me, and it was hard for my mother to take care of all of us on her own.

In sixth grade, I started to get into trouble at school. I didn’t enjoy learning there, and I never wanted to go to school. I skipped many classes. I wanted to come to Hodayot because my brothers were here and they told me it is a good opportunity, and a better environment for me.

In Hodayot, I attend special needs classes that help me learn. The services that I receive here helped me change my opinion of school. I like learning here, and I am able to focus better. The teachers are great here. They are not tough with us. They laugh with us and make school fun.

English is my favorite subject, because I had a strong foundation in English from living in America. I also speak Hebrew very well. I love to talk with my friends on the phone in my free time. I spend a lot of time with friends because I live here. We spend time together in the youth village, and we take part in a big variety of after-school programs together. I am very happy at Hodayot.
